

DETAILED EXPLANATION OF VEHICLE INSURANCE

Introduction:

This document describes all the details of car insurance included in the rental agreement.

Background:

It is very important to understand that there are significant differences in car insurance compared to Western countries in terms of responsibility in the event of damage. For example, in most countries of southern Africa such as Namibia and Botswana, it is not mandatory to have car insurance. In practice, this means that the majority of cars are not insured at all and that the owners and / or vehicle owners are personally responsible for compensation in the event of an accident.

Included in the Platinum Cover are:

- Glass damage
- One (1) damaged tire
- Sandstorm damage
- Non-party traffic accidents (except for negligence such as Speeding, drunk driving and any other negligent behaviour)
- Underbody damage

Hilux, Isuzu or Fortuner - Platinum Cover:

The deposit amounts up to N$ 2,500. - of the Platinum Cover is always to be borne in case of damage.

The amount of N$ 2,500.00 is payable if the amount is N$25 000.00 or less.

If the damage on the vehicle is more than N$ 25 000.00 the excess fee will be 10% of damage fee. For example, if the Damage is N$ 50 000.00 the excess fee will be N$ 5000.00.

Toyota Hilux 7-Seater | 9-Seater & Hilux Extreme - Platinum Cover:

The deposit amounts up to N$ 5,000.00 - of the Platinum Cover is always to be borne in case of damage.

The amount of N$ 5,000.00 is payable if the amount is N$25 000.00 or less.

If the damage on the vehicle is more than N$ 25 000.00 the excess fee of N$ 5000.00 will be charged plus the additional 10% of damage fee. Clutch damages are NOT COVERED by any insurance and will be paid in full by the renter.

Traffic accidents without external involvement:

These are, for example, accidents in which the vehicle rolls over due to loss of control or the vehicle crashes into a tree when reversing. Traffic accidents without third-party involvement are single person accidents and are not covered by insurance.

Coverage of damages by the insurance company:

The insurance described above covers damage if: it is a road traffic accident according to the definition of the insurance company; it is not negligence; it is not a situation involving exclusions.

Road traffic accident:

The definition of a road traffic accident according to insurance is an accident in which another vehicle, a pedestrian or an animal is involved. Traces on the vehicle must be visible (animal hair, blood, or other detectable substances), you must be able to show proof of an 3rd party accident.

This is the case if the driver and / or passengers do not comply with the law or the General Terms and Conditions. Here are a few examples where the insurance company does not pay for any damage incurred:

- If driving too fast (see speed limit)
- When driving over a red light.

Tips for Avoiding Windscreen Damage While Driving

Your windscreen is designed to shield you and your passengers from the elements and – as you might expect, that leaves your windscreen itself exposed to its fair share of dangers. Look below and familiarize yourself with some of the most common causes of windscreen damage. If you know the causes, it's all the easier to avoid the dreaded cracked windscreen.

Driving behind Trucks and other HGVs

Give yourself plenty of room when you are driving behind any trucks or other large vehicles. Most windscreen damage is caused by chips being kicked up by the vehicle directly ahead of you. The large wheels that you expect to find on trucks and HGVs not only throw more debris, but they also throw them further, so make sure to give them plenty of extra room. Vehicles with larger wheels are often fitted with mudflaps to protect fellow motorists from windscreen damage. However, sometimes not even mudflaps can leave you safe from flying debris. So, it's always better to play it safe and allow some extra distance between yourself and the car in front. If two wheels is bad, four wheels is even worse! If you find yourself driving directly behind a vehicle with four rear wheels – try to change lane as soon as it is safe to do so.

Roadworks

Roadworks can be the scourge of motorists and are notorious as a cause of damaged windscreens. Pneumatic drilling in particular is renowned for kicking up the kind of stone chips and debris that are often the cause of cracked windscreens. When planning your journey, do your best to take roadworks into account and avoid them wherever possible.

Keep your Distance

This one might seem a little obvious but it's better to be safe than sorry. The closer you drive to the car ahead of you, the more likely you are to expose your windscreen to damage from flying road chips and debris. Here's one way to look at it; the more room you leave between yourself and the car in front, the more time you are giving rocks to fall back to the ground without impacting your windscreen. If you want to avoid a costly stone chip repair, try, and leave at least two car lengths between yourself and the vehicle ahead of you.

Manage your Speed

As mentioned already, impact from flying stones and debris while driving is one of the most common causes of windscreen damage. But you might not realize that the extent of the damage is usually determined by the speed at which your car is travelling, as opposed to the speed at which the loose debris is flying through the air. So, as important as it is to leave plenty of room between yourself and the vehicle ahead, it's also wise to reduce your speed. A few less km/h stand to drastically reduce the likelihood of your car requiring windscreen crack repair.

Avoiding Potholes

Potholes are another one of the most common causes of windscreen damage. They increase in size, become more hazardous with each vehicle that drives through them and litter the road with loose stones and debris. Try to be extra vigilant of potholes if your car already has a small crack or chip in its glass, as hitting a pothole can send vibrations throughout your car that will exacerbate the issue. Windscreen damage aside; potholes can also cause considerable damage to your tires, knock your steering out of alignment and unbalance your wheels. For the benefit of your car overall, do your best to avoid poorly maintained road surfaces.

Please adhere to the above set of rules. Replacing a windscreen while on tour is not easy as not every town has a garage that replaces windscreens. Furthermore, it also depends on the availability of stock. Should you encounter a stone chip, please notify us within 24 hours.
