Champagne

Champagne is a sparkling wine that originates from the Champagne region of France. It's widely celebrated for its effervescence, elegance, and versatility, making it a popular choice for special occasions and celebrations. What sets Champagne apart from other Sparkling Wines is not just its taste, but also its production method and geographical indication.

Cap Classique

Sparkling wines are made using the traditional Champagne method. This method involves a secondary fermentation that occurs in the bottle, resulting in natural carbonation. Cap Classique wines are typically made from Chardonnay and Pinot Noir grapes, although other varieties may be used as well. The term "Cap Classique" emphasizes the quality and craftsmanship of these sparkling wines, which are often regarded as premium offerings within the South African wine industry.

SIMONSIG KAAPSE VONKEL SATIN NECTAR ROSÉ DEMI SEC

Sparkling Wine

Sparkling wine is a type of wine that contains carbon dioxide bubbles, creating effervescence or fizziness. This carbonation can occur naturally through secondary fermentation in the bottle, as in the traditional method used for Champagne, or through forced carbonation in a tank. Sparkling Wines can be made from various grape varieties and come in a range of styles, from dry to sweet, and can be produced in regions all over the world. They are often enjoyed on special occasions or as a refreshing beverage for celebrations.

Sauvignon Blanc

Sauvignon Blanc is a green-skinned grape variety that originates from the city of Bordeaux in France. The grape most likely gets its name from the French words sauvage (“wild”) and Blanc (“white”) due to its early origins as an indigenous grape in Southwest France. It is possibly a descendant of Savagnin. Sauvignon Blanc is planted in many of the world’s wine regions, producing a crisp, dry, and refreshing white varietal wine.

Riesling

Riesling is a white grape variety that originated in the Rhine region. Riesling is an aromatic grape variety displaying flowery, almost perfumed, aromas as well as high acidity. It is used to make dry, semi-sweet, sweet, and sparkling white wines. Riesling wines are usually varietally pure and are seldom oaked. As of 2004, Riesling was estimated to be the world's 20th most grown variety. Riesling is a variety that is highly "terroir-expressive", meaning that the character of Riesling wines is greatly influenced by the wine's place of origin.

Rosé

A rosé is a type of wine that incorporates some of the color from the grape skins, but not enough to qualify it as a red wine. It may be the oldest known type of wine, as it is the most straightforward to make with the skin contact method. The pink color can range from a pale “onionskin” orange to a vivid near-purple, depending on the grape varieties used and winemaking techniques. Usually, the wine is labelled rosé in French, Portuguese, and English-speaking countries, rosado in Spanish, or rosato in Italian.

Merlot

Merlot is one of the most widely planted red grape varieties in the world, along with its Bordeaux stablemate, Cabernet Sauvignon. With its soft, round tannins, it is bottled as an easy-drinking varietal wine in most wine-producing countries, from South Africa and Australia to Chile, Italy and the United States. In France, it is an important component of classic Bordeaux blends. Merlot-based Bordeaux cuvées are often fleshy, approachable and higher in alcohol than their Cabernet Sauvignon-led counterparts. Merlot's smooth tannins can be attributed to the grapes' thin skins. Primary flavour characteristics include raspberry, strawberry, black cherry and plum, as well as mocha, vanilla and cloves.

Shiraz

Shiraz wine refers to two different wines. Historically, the name refers to the wine produced around the city of Shiraz in present-day Iran. In the current era, "Shiraz" is an alternative name for the Syrah grape, mostly used in Australia and South Africa. The modern "Shiraz" grape is identical to Syrah and originated in southeast France with no established connection to the city of Shiraz. Shiraz grapes are small with thick, deep coloured skins, known for its deep purple hue and grippy tannins. Wines tend to be full-bodied with medium acidity and a mixture of intense black fruit and complex flavours, ranging from animal notes of leather to smoky notes of tobacco.

Fortified Wine

Before modern refrigeration, fortified wine was produced in an attempt to prevent wine spoilage by increasing its alcohol content. Distilled spirits like brandy are added at varying times during the fermentation process, which boosts the alcohol content and alters the flavor of the final product. If the spirits are added before the fermentation process is complete, the fortified wine acquires a sweeter taste. Conversely, the wine tends to be more dry if the spirits are added later. Both sweet and dry varieties are often served as aperitifs or digestifs before or after meals to help stimulate appetite and digestion.

Coravin Selection

The Coravin Wine Preservation System allows users to pour wine from a bottle without removing the cork. This is accomplished by inserting a thin, hollow needle through the cork, allowing wine to be poured out while argon gas is pumped into the bottle, thus preventing oxidation. The idea is that this preserves the wine remaining in the bottle, allowing it to be enjoyed over a longer period without the wine spoiling due to exposure to oxygen. This system is particularly useful for wine enthusiasts who wish to sample different wines without committing to finishing an entire bottle in one sitting, as well as for preserving high-quality or rare wines.

Your service ambassador will pour 100 ml of the chosen bottle for your tasting.
